

PRESS INVITATION

AI Action Summit: the Ministry of the Armed Forces and defence stakeholders take the floor.

- The Artificial Intelligence (AI) Action Summit will be held in France on February 10 and 11 February, 2025, at the Grand Palais. The event will bring together plenty of nations, heads of state and government, leaders of international organisations, small and large companies, representatives of the academic world, researchers, non-governmental organisations, artists and numerous personalities from civil society.
- Alongside with the AI Action Summit, the Ministry of Defence is organising Military Talks dedicated to AI in the defence and international relations sectors on February 10 at 2:00 pm at the École Militaire.
- Participants will be able to visit the booths of French industrials and start-ups, in the immediate vicinity of the two amphitheatres, where they will be able to discover their products and developments.

The technological revolution represented by AI is bringing profound changes to the Defense sector. The innovations it is likely to bring offer unprecedented opportunities, while at the same time raising legitimate concerns, in particular for the respect of international law and humanitarian law. In this context, the challenges are diverse: fully exploiting the potential of AI, while ensuring that its development and use are conceived and pursued in a responsible manner.

This aim of this event is to bring together the Defense AI community (military delegations, manufacturers), diplomats, researchers and academics around a series of conferences and roundtables.

They will be given the floor to discuss the use of AI on the battlefields and the challenges of developing AI models and applications capable of being deployed in environments that are constrained in terms of computing power and energy consumption.

These presentations will be complemented by conferences on the issues and risks of military AI in a context of technological acceleration and geopolitical competition.
